

Why is Singing Important? Film Transcript

Lucinda Geoghegan, Education Director- National Youth Choir of Scotland

Singing's so important in the lives of young children for a number of reasons, For me, first of all because it's fun. Children like to sing, it's an enjoyable experience. It's a human activity. Singing with others brings human beings together and I think that is a wonderful thing.

Possibly the biggest benefit to singing though, is language development. Babies are watching everything we do. Babies are mimicking everything we do, so the clearer articulation in singing is being caught by babies.

It's a much slower speech pattern. So when we sing, we articulate much clearer than when we speak.
